In the second quarter, English II students read and analyzed Frankenstein as well as a variety of British poetry from the Romantic period to the 20th century. They also read a book of their choice for enrichment reading and completed a related assignment to show their understanding of the novel. They continued to study vocabulary as well as practicing grammar and effective writing style techniques. Finally, they completed the long term research project, in which they had to analyze a short story independently, then research literary criticism, and incorporate some of their findings into a final revision.

Gregory has continued to do great work in English class in the second semester. He is a mature student with a positive attitude! Gregory is always well prepared for class, and he participates daily, adding good questions and comments. Gregory did a nice job of completing the steps of the research process thoroughly and on time. I was impressed with his final draft as well because he was not reluctant to rethink his ideas and revise thoroughly even though it meant a great deal of work on his part! I hope Gregory will continue to practice revisions as he develops his writing skills. I've enjoyed working with Gregory over the past year and a half, and I wish him all the best in Writers' Workshop in the second semester!

The second quarter topics in Chemistry included periodic properties, bonding and the concept of the mole. The quarter ended with integrating balanced equations and mole ratio quantities so that as scientists we are able to predict the amount of product expected in a chemical reaction. Next quarter will begin by looking at the effect changing temperature and pressure has on a chemical reaction.

I am pleased with Greg's hard work in Chemistry! He is always well prepared for class and asks excellent questions. I look forward to his continued success in the second semester.

Gregory had a fabulous semester and ended on a very strong note with a great exam grade. He has worked steadily and conscientiously throughout the semester, as reflected in his very good daily work and test grades. His current event presentation, in particular, reflected his remarkable maturity, grace and poise under pressure. It is clear that Gregory does understand the materials, so I encourage him for this coming semester to push himself even more in his analysis of them, particularly in his writing. He seems to have mastered the formal essay structure and now can turn to fine tuning his style. I look forward to Gregory's further successes throughout next semester!

Gregory's natural talent, plus his persistent and conscientious work, really pay big-time dividends. His test scores are usually in the top one- third of the class. The questions she asks reflect not only a curiosity about the material, but the fact that he puts in a lot of study time on her own. He has come a long way since September and is now
